A Gaussian random field (GRF) is a random field involving Gaussian probability density functions of the variables. A one-dimensional GRF is also called a Gaussian process. An important special case of a GRF is the Gaussian free field. [citation needed] With regard to applications of GRFs, the initial conditions of physical cosmology generated by quantum mechanical fluctuations during cosmic ...

One notable variant of a Markov random field is a conditional random field, in which each random variable may also be conditioned upon a set of global observations. In this model, each function is a mapping from all assignments to both the clique k and the observations to the nonnegative real numbers. This form of the Markov network may be more appropriate for producing discriminative ...

In this tutorial I'll be discussing how to use Markov Random Fields and Loopy Belief Propagation to solve for the stereo problem. I picked stereo vision because it seemed like a good example to begin with, but the technique is general and can be adapted to other vision problems easily.
