Illusory superiority's relationship with self-esteem is uncertain. The theory that those with high self-esteem maintain this high level by rating themselves highly is not without meritâ€”studies involving non-depressed college students found that they thought they had more control over positive outcomes compared to their peers, even when controlling for performance.

MysteriousFool writes... I looked around and someone recommended to invest in Exchange traded funds. What do you think. I'm not entirely sure why you'd want to invest solely into (emerging market/global) ETF's, especially considering that Australian equities have one of the best risk/return performances and Australia has one of the highest interest rates available.

I recently wrote two posts for the Sound Money Project about Swedish monetary innovation. The first is about an effort by the Swedish central bankâ€”the Riksbankâ€”to force retailers to accept cash, and the other is about the e-Krona, a potential Riksbank-issued digital currency. This post covers a third topic.
